day at noon. It was a beautiful wedding, though exmely simple. There was not a crowd of spectators, the number of invitations being limited to intimate friends and relatives. Owing to the inclement weather the guests asked only for the ceremony had not put on their brightest attire, but the members of the two amilies and relatives were, without exception, in hand some spring garments. The decorations of the chancel esisted of paims, which were used in profusion, and the altar were several vases of Easter lilles.

bride was rather punctual. She entered the church with her brother, Pierre Lorillard, jr., who gave her away. Her gown, in the Empire style, was made was cut away slightly from the neck and the long sleeves were finished with great shoulder putls. At the left shoulder was worn a superb diamond chrysanthemum, a gift of the bride's brother, and the only other jewel worn was a band, with heart of diamonds, worn about the left wrist, one of the bride-groom's gifts. The veil, a beautiful piece of point lace, which fell nearly to the end of the train, was worn well back from the face. It was fastened in Mrs. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. R. #### THE WEEK IN SOCIETY.

since the beginning of the week there has been an almost continued occurrence of weddings in town and out. Could the brides, with their attendant maldens, adorned in all their wedding finery, be formed into a procession and reviewed by he descendant of Columbus, just arrived on these shores so many centuries after his predecessor, it would make him feel that his illustrious ancestor had not "discovered" in vain. Of all the brides of the week, in New-York at least, the greatest interest centred about those of yesterday, Miss Mand Lorillard and Miss Cowdin being most widely known in society. It is rather singular that while the bride-maids of the last week chose, with few exceptions, to wear pink, those of the week previous fixed upon shades of green. Nuptial festivities will continue to absorb the attention of society throughout the month, though some attention will doubtless be devoted to the doingof the Duke of Verngua and his party.

The affairs of the Bradley Martins are being freely discussed, and society is on the tiptoe of expectation regarding the wedding of Tuesday. Martin has issued most imperative orders regarding admission to the church. She is determined that is one, not even her own mother, shall be permitted to step within the portals of Grace Church without the requisite silver-printed invitation. It is said that the invitations were printed in silver so that no one not invited would dure to gain admission by presenting an ordinary wedding invitation. The extreme youth of the bride that is to be has been variously commented on. One keen-spoken woman not alto gether in favor of a marriage from the nursery de-clares that Mr. Gerry ought to be called in to forbid the bans, but Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin are doubt givens of pink crepe trimmed with heavy ruffles of white, and large white hats. ## MINES AND MINING.

A DEPARTMENT WELL-NIGH COMPLETE AT

THE WORLD'S FAIR. THE EXHIBITS OF THE VARIOUS STATES OF THE UNION-THE PROVINCES OF CANADA AND AUSTRALIA-GERMANY AND GREAT BRITAIN-ONLY CALIFORNIA AND

INDIANA BEHINDHAND.

(FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.)

Chicago, April 13.-It is in the Mines and Mining Building that one receives the first impressions, on his tour through the great departments, of the elaborate scene which is to be presented to the public view when the Exposition is fairly opened. This is one of the largest of the group of main buildings, reached through the Sixty-second-st. entrance, and in the centre of which stands the Administration Building with its handsome dome of gilt and white. The Mines and Mining Building is 700 feet by 350 feet, and has a floor area of 8.7 acres. The interior space inclosed is 630 feet long, 100 feet high in the centre, and 47 feet high at the sides. It has an imposing exterior, and the main central entrances are ninety feet to the apex of the pediment

The exhibits for this department have nearly all arrived. There has been some tardiness in forwarding those from California, as also those from Indiana. In fact, these two States seem to be about the only ones in the list of sluggards, and the fault does not appear to lie with the State authorities, as they have done all that could be done to hurry forward the material to be placed on exhibition. The delay in the arrival from California is said to be due to a blockade on the railroads. In the case of Indiana the fault is understood to rest with the contractor who was charged with the task of transportation and the arranging of the pavilion. The designs for both States are said to be extremely elaborate and beautiful.

The work of constructing the several designs especially along the main avenue of this building, is rapidly going forward, and already is sufficiently developed to afford an idea of what the effect will be when everything is in place. As one enters from the south the pavilion of Colorado stands upon his right, and that of Old Mexico directly opposite, on his left. Mexico has reserved a large space, and already forty bronze cases or cabinets for mineral specimens, each of the value of $500, are in place, or in position for easy shifting in the further arrangement and elaboration of the pavilion.

The design for Colorado is unique from an artistic point of view, and is suggestive of a sort feet; three auxiliary pavilions, four feet in diameter, and sixteen stone columns. The cases will be arranged in a circular form, just inside the entrance to the pavilion, which is at the correr. Here will be disfributed and exposed to view specimens of all the precious minerals which have rendered Colorado great in her reputation for mineral wealth. There will be specimens also of coal, from, building material, etc.

Adjoining Colorado is the pavilion of Montana actth of which is that of Utah. So large is he space applied for and allotted to Mexico that the space applied for and another to the its front on the main avenue equals that of the three States of Colorado, Montana and Utah on the eastern side. The payilions of the two inst-named States are not yet far advanced in the way of preparation, but they are to be among the most artistic and attractive of the entire mineral group. That of Utah will present a front consisting of columns of a conglomerate stone found in certain parts of the State. It resembles in appearance very closely the columns in the old its front on the main avenue equals that of the appearance very closely the columns in the old Hall of Representatives at Washington, except that its sections of mixed stone are smaller than these found in the massive columns of Statuary Hall. North of Utah is the space allotted to Idaho The exhibits from this State are at hand, but have not been set in position. Adjoining this is California, and next beyond South Dakota. The last-named State will send from the Black Hills a fine selection of the many classes of minerals rendered that region famous Directly opposite California is the Brazil pavilion. The design is fully constructed on the exterior. and produces a novel effect. Probably one of the most beautiful designs will be that supplie w the State of Wisconsin, whose different varieties of beautiful and high-grade building stone afford an excellent source upon which to draw for the elaboration of an artistic and unique design, such as is here provided. The most striking of the entire group is that o Germany. This pavilien is on the southwest owner of the centre of the hall. On the northwest, directly opposite, and on the north site of the aisle extending from east to west, is the space allotted to Great Britain. Michigan occusies the northeast corner, and Missouri the south east corner, and the four present a majestic group n their separate departments of informalogy. lesion for Germany is almost completely claborated. It consists of a display of iron and steel. In the centre is a representation of a sort of ose free, or flower bush, about twenty feet high. composed of different styles and sizes of cast iron tubing, curved in all manner of ways and so put together as to make the suggestion quite realistic On the south side of this mass of tubing is at obelisk of the same height, built of sections of steel rails of the standard T pattern, and of vary ing weights. These are laid crosswise, according to their sizes, and the smallest form the cap r apex A similar design, of like size, composef cast iron, stands on the north corner of the pavilion. A brick wall has been constructed in the rear, and above the steel and iron display, an back of it, against this wall, there will appear a allegorical picture to be worked out in metal.

The space to be used by Great Britain is divided up in well proportioned allotments between that nation and her colonies; and that of Canada, which comes in under the mother country, is again divided up in sections, one being for the Province of Quebec, another for the Province of Ontario and a fliird for British Columbia. The exhibit from New South Wales is one of the most complete that will appear in the entire collection Native ores of various kinds, and in large amounts are already constructed into pyramids. Among these are silver, copper and zinc ores; while a large display is offered of the metals in their molten condition, and in the shape prepared for

The pavilion for use by France stands on the west side of the main aisle, directly opposite that on the north side occupied by Pennsylvania. The Keystone State will make a bountiful showing So also will West Virginia. Kentucky will be opposite New South Wales. This pavilion as yet is unconstructed, but the material and exhibits are all at hand. As an illustration of people's ideas of the eternal fitness of things, somebody trolling along pasted upon one of the boxes of material an advertising sign of tye whiskey. A visitor, looking upon this as entirely inappropriate, crased the word "rye," and substituted therefor the style and title "Sour Mash." It is not to be assumed, however, from this little bit or pleasantry that either rye or sour mash are to be included in the mineral exhibits of Kentucky though there may be something in the design for the pavilion of this State which will admit of storing away a little of both in rocky elefts for subsidiary refreshments for tourists as they make their rounds through this great building. If their rounds through this great building. If they do this, the Kentucky pavilion is likely to become one of the most popular on the entire Exposition grounds. There is a sense of wear someness associated with tramping over these hard floors; but there is stimulation in the very thought that when you reach Kentucky the latch-string will be out, and you will find something in the closet or providently hidden away under a stone.

Missouri, occupying its commanding position the southeast corner, at the intersection of main aisle, and Michigan on the northeast, will take every advantage of their magnificent positions and present designs of striking originality and beauty. Michigan has a splendid mineral bed from which to extract her building material, as well as rich deposits of ore with which to store her cabinets and showenses. Ohio is already on the floor, and a beautiful portico, with solid columns, floor and canopy, carved from native building stone of time quality, adorns the front of her pavilion. Sine will be generous in the amount of her exhibits, as she is in her supply of statesmen and other things. One feature of her display will be a solid block of coal weighing eleven tons. As originally cut and removed from the earth the piece weighed fourteen tons, but in order to preserve a striking maximum weight, and at the same time to insure its safe shipment, a section weighing three tons was removed from one end. The whole block is now in place, and the three-ton section is placed upon the top.

The pavilions herein referred to, being on the central avenue, will all be worthy of the location which has been assigned them, both in artistic effect and in the quality of the exhibits which they will contain. California will be exceedingly rich in her gold display. In other sections of the building the diamond specimens are expected to be onderful in the degree of their beauty and value, and to this end Africa will make a liberal contribution. Extending from the rear of the pavilions along the main assle, toward the cest and west sides of the hall, the scace will be occupied in many places by manufacturers of metals, and here also there will be many features of interest as well as of novelty.

The gallery, which is elevated twenty-five feet from the main floor, and which extends for a width of fifty feet entirely around the building, will be not the least interesting of the display in this department of the Exposition. Some of the States will occupy space in the gallery will be devoted almost exclusively to technical and neta fleation over the fact that it is to be present on this occasion.

There was some apprehension at one time that the space to be devoted to mines and mining would be inadequate in view of the exhibits that have been proferred and accepted. The Superintendent of Installation of the Mines and Mining Building. John B. Goodman, says, however, that they will be able to take care of everything that has come, or is to come, and the display will be the most superb that has ever been presented to public view.

As stated in the beginning, this department is more advanced in the way of preparation than any other, and there is no doubt expressed that, with two or three possible exceptions, every pavilion will be in complete form by May 1.
